Hi there,

I'm applying for the Level 1/2 Service Desk Officer role at your Parkside office — and I'll be upfront straight away: I don't have the two years of MSP experience you're after. What I can tell you is why I think I'm still worth a look.

I hold a Bachelor of IT and a Google IT Support Professional Certificate, with real working knowledge of Microsoft 365 (Exchange Online, SharePoint, Teams), Entra ID, Intune, Active Directory, and Windows desktop/server environments. But more than the paper, I've spent the last year building and personally running three live systems — including TicketDesk, a help-desk platform I designed around the exact lifecycle you'd be working in every day (log, prioritise, assign, resolve), and SkyOps, where I monitor a live system and respond to issues as they come up, not in theory but for real. I genuinely enjoy this work, and I keep clean documentation as a habit, not because someone's checking.

The "highly regarded" project coordination experience on your listing is something I can actually speak to directly — I led a 5-person team as Project Manager delivering a live platform for a real external client, acting as the go-between for the client and the dev team, translating progress into plain English the whole way through.

On the practical side: I've got a current driver's licence and my own reliable car, so onsite visits aren't an issue, and I'm happy to do the National Police Check.

I know I'm not the obvious fit on paper, but I'm a fast learner, genuinely good with people, and keen to grow into this with a team that values knowledge-sharing over hierarchy — which is exactly the kind of place I want to build a career. Happy to chat whenever suits.

Cheers,

Priyanshu
