Dear Hiring Manager,

I'm writing to apply for the Level 2 IT Support role at WGA. I want to be upfront from the start: I don't yet have paid experience under a formal "Level 2" title. What I can offer instead is a genuine, hands-on understanding of the technical environment you've described, built through self-directed projects and certification rather than a previous job — and I'd ask you to weigh that on its own merits rather than dismiss it for not matching the usual shape of a candidate's background.

I hold a Google IT Support Professional Certificate and have practical exposure to Microsoft 365 administration (Exchange Online, Teams, SharePoint, OneDrive), Active Directory, Group Policy, and Entra ID/Intune endpoint management through my Bachelor of IT coursework and independent study. More importantly, I've built and now personally operate three live production systems, including TicketDesk (ticketdesk-app.onrender.com), a help-desk platform I designed around the same incident lifecycle your ITSM platform will manage — create, prioritise, assign, resolve — and SkyOps, where I run a live health-check service and respond to issues as they arise, in practice rather than theory.

Documentation discipline is something I apply by habit, not because I'm told to — every project I run has current, accurate technical notes, which I understand matters directly for your knowledge base articles and change management process. I've also led cross-functional coordination directly: as Project Manager on a university capstone, I worked across frontend, backend, and infrastructure workstreams simultaneously while acting as the main point of contact for a real external client — the same kind of collaboration this role asks for across Level 1 and Level 3 teams.

I understand citizenship is noted as relevant given your Defence-related project work, and I'll answer the right-to-work question on my application honestly and directly. I'd welcome the chance to discuss my situation further if that's useful context for you.

Thank you for considering my application — I'm genuinely excited about the chance to build real Level 2 experience with a team like WGA.

Kind regards,

Priyanshu
